WEEKLY CHRONICLE.

Clubs of Twenty, or over, per copy...... 1 00 Late Summer Care of Cows. Too many dairymen are careless about feeding their herds in the busy time of harvest; yet, this is perhaps, the most trying time of the season. The farmer is extremely busy, and forgets to inspect his pastures, and see that there is sufficient food to keep his cows in condition and to produce a full yield of milk. He often says: "I fear my pastures | are getting too short for my cows, but I hope that we shall soon have rains that will give fresh feed, and then my cows will come again." But this is a mistaken opinion, which he seldom takes the trouble fully to investigate. Milk is a temporary product, and naturally grows less as the time advances from calving, and when there is a falling off it can seldom be recovered; so that when a cow falls off five or ten pounds in her vance of great atmospheric disturmilk it means the loss of about that amount every day in the remainder 1,000 or 1,500 leagues." Autumn Seeding to Grass.

extra feeding.

It is the general custom to seed to grass after some grain crops, as wheat, oats or barley; but when it is desired to get a field into grass in the quickest time this practice need not be followed, says the American Agr culturist. Grass and clover seed of may be sown this month with the probability of success. This is not without its risk; a dry spell may prevent the seed from germinating until the season of growth is pretty well passed, when only a poor "catch" will be obtained. A shelter to the young grass and clover plants that will protect them from the hot sun, and at the same time prevent the soil from becoming too dry, is desirfeeling; los of appetite and dread of exercise; scanty and painful discharge of ariously colored urine; minute shreds or casts in the urine; and, when the disease is of long duration, here is which grow quickly, and with their water a protection to Origin of the Signal Service.

New York Sun. To such efficiency had Gen. Myer brought his bereau that last year the probabilities fully verified amounted to seventy per cent.; while those that were verified in part amounted to twenty per cent., and those that failed were only ten per cent. The last congress gave Gen. Myer what he had long desired, a full brigadier general's commission. The causes which are said to have led to the organization of a weather bereau here are interesting. In November, 1854, while the Anglo-French fleet was operating in the Black sea against Sebastopol the tidings were flashed along the wires that a mighty tempest had arisen on the western coast of France and was on its way eastward. The dispatch was sent from Paris by the French minister of war, and it reached the allied fleet in time to enable the ships to put to sea before the cyclone had traveled over the inter viewing 500 leagues. In an official report the French minister afterward wrote: "It appears that by the aid of th electric telegraph and barometric observations, we may be apprised several hours or several days in ad-
